William Frederick "Bill" Spengler

William Frederick "Bill" Spengler, well-known South Asian and Islamic numismatist, was born January 12, 1923, in Menasha, Wisconsin, to a family of lawyers and merchants. His parents Silas L. and Margaret (Melaas) Spengler, were consummate collectors of, at various times, American Indian relics as a family pursuit, postage stamps, antique furniture, and paintings, pattern glass and miniature portraits on ivory. So Bill came to collecting naturally. He was also a dedicated Boy Scout and received his eagle rank in 1939.

Bill was educated in the local schools until packed off to the elite Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts in 1939 for educational upgrading. There he excelled in history, oratory, and debate, and managed the wrestling team. Breaking with Eastern prep school tradition of moving on to Ivy League colleges, on graduating from Andover in 1941, Bill returned to his native state and enrolled in the University of Wisconsin to prepare for politics or international relations. He was elected president of Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman honor society, at the end of his first year.

When WWII intervened, Bill enrolled in the Army Enlisted Reserve and stepped up his R.O.T.C. training. In March 1943, he was called to active service and trained in infantry units until transferred to the Army Signal Corps, ending up breaking Japanese Army codes at the Army Security Agency, Arlington Hall, Virginia. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in August 1945. Returning to his alma mater in 1946, Bill majored in Political Science and minored in Geography and received a B.A. degree with honors and Phi Beta Kappa in 1948 and an M.A. in 1950.

Meanwhile, Bill had passed the tough written and oral exams for the U.S. Foreign Service, and attended law school while waiting to be called up. During summer school 1949, he met and courted the gracious Phyllis "Phid" Watkins of Lincoln, Nebraska, a Political Science major at the University of Arizona. He persuaded her of the merits of life in the Foreign Service and they were married in Colorado Springs in 1950. They produced three sturdy children, raised in the Foreign Service: Sarah, 50, William H., 49, and John C., 46. Bill and Phid have four grandchildren.

As it happened, Bill's Foreign Service assignments led him to become the Department of State's leading specialist on Pakistan and Afghanistan 1958-1976: Third Secretary in the Embassy, Bangkok, Thailand, 1951-1953; Second Secretary, Oslo, Norway, 1954-1955; Hindi-Urdu language and area training, 1955-1956; Consul in the Consulate-General, Lahore, Pakistan, 1956-1958; Pakistan Country Officer, Department of State, 1958-1960; Professor of South Asian Studies, Foreign Service Institute, 1960-1962; Consul and Principal Officer, Consulate, Peshawar, Pakistan, 1962-1965; Political Counselor, Kabul, Afghanistan, 1965-1967; Director, International Visitor Program, Department of State, 1967-1969; Country Director for Pakistan and Afghanistan, 1969-1971, senior training, 1971-1972, Deputy Special Assistant to the Secretary of State (Kissinger) for World Population Matters, 1972-1974, and Consul General, Lahore, 1974-1976, from which post he retired.

Bill's first numismatic experience ended in disaster. His Cub Scout pack used to meet in the garage of a man named Joe Post who happened to have invented coin boards, and at the end of each meeting he would invite each Cub to select a board in any denomination and start filling it. Bill completed a Lincoln cent board including a 1909-S VDB in high grade. But it was destroyed when Menasha High School, while hosting a student hobby show, burned to the ground. That turned Bill off to numismatics for thirty years.

However, on his first day in Kabul in 1965, he noticed that ancient, medieval, and modern coins -- some of them appearing to be authentic -- proliferated in the primitive local shops. And on returning home, he announced to his family that he was going to go for numismatics again, which he did with a passion for the next forty years. He is a fellow at the ANS and the Royal Numismatic Society, an active member of the ANA and recipient of its Medal of Merit, and founder of the Numismatic Society of Pakistan. He has chaired ANS Committees on Greek, Islamic, and South Asian coins and ANA Committees on Exhibiting, Judging, and the Museum. He served as Numismatics International's Education Program Moderator for many years. A veteran exhibitor at ANA conventions, he won eight first-place awards in three classes, culminating in the coveted Howland Wood Best-of-Show award in 1988 for an exhibit on "The Satamana System of Ancient Indian Coinage." Since then he was focused on judging others' competitive exhibits.

Bill has co-authored the seminal "Standard Guide to South Asian Coins and Paper Money" for Krause Publications and "Turkoman Bronze Coins and their Iconography" with Wayne G. Sayles, as well as articles in numismatic journals.

Spengler first encountered Islamic coins following his assignment to Afghanistan in 1965. In fact, back in 1967 I first was introduced to Bill, not in person but by what we now call "snailmail". Together with his friend Al Gammon, now a coin dealer in Arizona, he supplied me with large groups of Islamic coins for my budding collection.

Bill did not become seriously interested in the early Islamic coins until the late 1970s, and quite sensibly restricted his collecting to mints in what is present day Afghanistan, Pakistan and India.

89. UMAYYAD: al-Walid I, 705-715, AR dirham (2.88g), Herat, AH92, A-128, ef $140

Sijistan was the provincial name, formerly Sakastan and now called Sistan. The mint was theoretically located at the caliph, Zaranj, though it is possible that the actual mint location might have varied, perhaps between climactically sensible summer and winter locations.

This selection of ancient Ceylon coins came from a single lot acquired by Spengler back in the 1960s or early 1970s. Little was known then of these coins, and they were undoubtedly very inexpensive, typical of oriental coins back in the "good old days". No comprehensive catalog of these coins has been attempted since the initial work by Codrington about 100 years ago. Little is known of the dating or regional location of these issues.

COMMENTARY: We have been honored to handle Bill Spengler's great collection of Indian and related coins. While this list includes some of the finest coins in the collection, we have thousands more in stock, mainly less expensive coins, which will be offered among the next several pricelists, including group lots of inexpensive types. We would like to keep Bill's collection of Durrani-Barakzai intact as it is the likely the finest in private hands. The collection has approximately 1200 pieces, mostly silver and bronze with 4 gold pieces. It includes some tremendous rarities including a magnificent run of Peshawar and Qandahar mint coins. Interested parties please inquire. Steve
