COMMENTARY: We are now filing our better coins in 2x2 plastic flips. This makes them much more easily examined, especially at shows or at the office. Unfortunately, the polyvinyl plastic can be harmful to coins, especially under hot humid weather conditions, and for that reason we recommend that purchasers do not keep coins in these flips for more than a few years. You can purchase archival flips, which do not deteriorate, even in humid weather, or paper envelopes for long term storage. The archival flips unfortunately tend to break if not gently handled, but with careful handling they should last indefinitely. They can be ordered through most major coin firms, especially those who sell ancient coins.
