- COMMENTARY: First, let me thank you all for making our last photo list (#197) our most successful in several years. Popular interest in numismatic collecting seems to be on the increase, after many lackluster years, together with a growing interest in world history. Perhaps we should thank developments such as History Channel on US television, which has risen from a tentative try to one of the most popular national TV stations.
- We have included on this list interesting selections of Mamluk, Abbasid, copper Umayyad, early Ottoman, and many other categories. We have also begun a section for Chinese coins (and some Annamese coins as well), which we hope to maintain on a regular basis. Also included are some interesting 15th to 19th century European coins, including a hoard group of liondaalders of the Netherlands. And please check our "supersized" Monthly Special selection.
- There is a fascinating website for those interested in learning more about Islamic coins, both common and rare varieties, www.zeno.ru. This is also a useful location for information about Islamic coins you cannot identify. My personal belief is that for specialized subjects, such as pre-modern Islamic numismatics, Internet "publications" will ultimately supplant traditional catalogs. Technology is rapidly approaching the point where we will be able to print out our own "books" at home, undoubtedly after a paid subscription to the publisher. By eliminating the tedious and costly process of printing and distributing, the author, the publisher and the purchaser should all benefit.
