COMMENTARY: I had endeavored to congratulate myself by making list #200 a special and lengthy illustrated list produced with our new database software, Catalog Master, but alas, learning the new technology has proven far more complex than we had anticipated. The result is that our glorious photo list will have to be #201, as we have to generate a list right away, in order to sell more coins! Of course, we might comprehend this phenomenon just as we understood the commencement of the 21st century. Thus I can justify putting off that magnificent photo list to represent the completion of 200 lists rather than merely hope that the 200th list would ultimately be successful.

Catalog Master will also accommodate a hopefully excellent website, which will be under the name stevealbum.com. With luck, we'll have it in operation by the end of November or shortly afterwards. Once it is online, we would greatly appreciate any comments from users that might help us improve its convenience. We should have a beta version shortly.

I will be on holiday for a week in New York City, my first chance in many years to enjoy the city, rather than merely concentrate on coin show business. And Joe plans a short holiday in Seattle after I return. We both need time away from business from time to time!

My intended "celebration" one day in New York is to walk from the top of Broadway at 220th Street in Inwood to the Battery Park, something like 14 miles. This is same walk with which on the 2nd of May 1935 my parents celebrated their marriage on the previous day, for during the depression, they could not afford a proper holiday. At 5¢ for the Subway, their cost to leave Greenwich Village for 220th Street and to return there from Battery Park was a staggering total of 20¢! The Subway is still reasonably priced at $1.50 per fare.

Summer has finally ended here, having our last bone dry 100° weather this past Wednesday. The last two days have been cool, windy and rainy, signaling the approach of our admittedly mild wet winter.
