COMMENTARY: As many of you are aware, I just returned from China. I took a similar trip to the one that Steve took last year. I visited the following Chinese cities, Hong Kong, Macao, Zhuhai, Guangzhou (Canton), Xi'an, Ürümqi, Turfan and Kashgar. I traveled with Roger Doo, who accompanied Steve on his trip, and with Jim Anderson, a coin dealer from Santa Rosa, California, who specializes in Chinese coins.

I first went to Hong Kong were I attended two auctions, the first, the Asia Pacific Auction run by K.K. Wong, the second, the Hong-Kong Auction 41 by Baldwin's Auctions Ltd, Ma Tak Wo Numismatic Co Ltd, and Moneterium (Singapore) Pte Ltd. The second auction was operated in conjunction with the Hong Kong International Coin Show. There was hardly an empty chair at either auction with bidding very strong on the floor. It seems by the bidding in both auctions that prices for machine struck Chinese as well as better Chinese cast issues are on there way up again. A good percentage of the bidders of Chinese coins had come from mainland China to bid, but there were very few American or European bidders on the floor at either auction. The three Sikh coins in the Baldwin's sale realized prices much higher than estimate as one would expect and other Indian coins fetched high prices as well. High grade Hong Kong and Straits Settlements coins fetched shockingly high prices. Both auctions were well run and attending the two was very insightful as to current market conditions in Asia.

Walking the floor at the Hong Kong show was a challenge as on opening day. There were so many people attending that one could scarcely navigate the floor without pushing others aside to view coins in the dealers' cases. One curious thing is that about 30% of the items for sale at the Hong Kong show were watches. A major item of concern in Asia is to be constantly vigilant about fakes. In Hong Kong, I was offered the usual high quality fake Saudi 4 pound gold coins that have been in the market for years. I was also offered British Indian 'silver' rupee brockages (lakhis). One Pakistani dealer with a store in Hong Kong had a set of William IV through George VI rupee brockage errors that he strongly asserted were genuine. These fakes are obvious when one sees the entire set together. The set includes William IV, two types of East India Company Victoria, two Imperial Victorias, an Edward VII and George V & VII. All are struck on the same size planchets, have poor quality die work, and have the same identical dull grey color to them. The same dealer on the floor had several poor quality cast gold coin fakes of various common Delhi Sultan and Mughal rulers. I also encountered a highly deceptive machine struck fake of the Chinese Sinkiang Province Y-5 type four-miscal silver. Also, for the first time, I encountered high quality cast fakes of rare Mughal silver and gold. This was quite shocking to me as to date I have only seen Indian fakes of more common items that one would expect to see for sale in local bazaars, only more reason to buy from dealers who have a good reputation. Moreover, avoid buying ANY coins from dealers or collectors in Asia whom you don't personally know. More about fakes I encountered in mainland China later. I was able to buy a good amount in the two auctions and found some better coins on the bourse floor as well, mostly from from European and American dealers I've known for years.

While in Hong Kong and took a one day excursion over to the former Portuguese colony of Macao. It was nice to get a break from the hectic bustle of Kowloon. During my last visit to Macao about 15 years ago, there was only one or two small casinos. Well, as in most of China, things change rapidly. There is now under construction the largest casino I've ever seen. It is the Sand's Venetian Macao Hotel and has 16,300 square meters of gambling space, a 100 meter long buffet in one of the myriad restaurants and suites as large as 8,000 square feet, vastly outsizeing the Sand's Venetian in Las Vegas. But even with this and many other changes to the Macao skyline, the city retains the slower paced Portuguese nature of earlier days. And the local Macao cuisine, which is an interesting mix of Portuguese and Chinese, is the best in China, in my opinion. While in Macao I met with a dealer friend of mine and who a nice selection of early Chinese cast coins of which I purchased a group you will find on our upcoming lists.

When I returned to Hong Kong, I met up with Jim Anderson and together with Roger Doo we caught the ferry to Zhuhai whose name translates to "Pearl Sea." It is located on the southern coast of Guangdong province in the Pearl River Delta and borders Macau to the south. It became one of the Special Economic Zone cities in 1980, the beginning of its booming economic development. In this modern and growing city of 1,300,000 people, we met with a Chinese dealer who took us to a wonderful Yunnan style restaurant before going back to his brand new 25-floor apartment to look at more coins. More to follow...
