| The reverse design features deeply engraved, cruciform shields bearing the royal crests and Welsh plumes in the angles between them, with a tiny Saint George slaying the dragon surrounded by the Order of the Garter in the center. Rare. While dated 1799 (in cursive digits), most of the known Fullerton patterns were actually restrikes made by Matthew Young some two decades later. Original strikes exist only in copper. The idea behind these was to celebrate the future king, George IV, with a coinage that might circulate in Scotland. The Prince of Wales was, among his various titles, Seneschal (judicial steward) of Scotland. Legend has it that the prince gave permission to Fullerton to create these patterns, of various denominations, but that after a few impressions were taken objections were raised at court to using on coins the prince's effigy, and the royal arms, while George III remained alive. As official medalist to the prince, John Milton certainly was able to create a lifelike portrait, and here we see the famous prince in all his effete glory. When the project failed, the dies were put away, only to be "rescued" some years later by Young, whose restriking efforts created these beautiful classics. | | 113998. These Gansu coins were issued between 1914 and the mid 1920s when a formal mint was established and province began to issue its own coinage. These coins were from brass recovered from melting imperial Chinese cast cash coins, which were still in circulation. Since it took about six cast cash coins worth of brass to make a single 100 cash coin, the enterprise was quite profitable for the warlord. Yuan Shikai was an important Chinese general and politician famous for his influence during the late Qing Dynasty, his role in the events leading up to the abdication of the last Qing Emperor of China, his autocratic rule as the first President of the Republic of China, and his short-lived attempt to revive the Chinese monarchy, with himself as the "Great Emperor of China". He took the nien hao (reign title), Hongxian (Constitutional Abundance), on January 1, 1916 but never held a accession rite and he abandoned monarchism on March 22, 1916. He did on June 6 of the same year. The only other coin with his title as Hongxian is the silver dollar Y-332 type and although it is much more expensive than this type, this is the rarer of the two.
